Otherwise, for the first time in months, we are open for normal library business.
Due to the various closures of the Library caused by the coronavirus crisis, checkouts of eBooks from our Overdrive system have increased considerably. From June 2019-January 2020, the library checked out 2,327 downloads; from June 2020-January 2021, we checked out 6,807. We have also noted a large increase in requests for information from the digital scans of the Solvay Process Collection, and we have expanded the number of our virtual programs for the public. Overall, the global coronavirus emergency has greatly accelerated the development of our electronic services. We are developing a plan to scan the extensive collection of artwork, photos and maps in our historical collection. This plan will include scanning books in this collection that are 96 years old or older and have therefore passed into the public domain.
